The National Association of Clinical Tutors (NACT) was originally founded in 1969 to further the interests of what were then called District Clinical Tutors nationally and to help and support them in their work. Our membership has grown since then to encompass the variety of leading educators involved at the local level in the management and delivery of postgraduate medical education across the UK.

Through our courses, workshops and conferences, we provide opportunities for our members and others to improve their skills and knowledge in the field of PGME.

NACT UK liaises on behalf of its members with many national bodies involved in Medical Education. We communicate our knowledge of these to our membership through a long established information cascade system.

To emphasise its role across the UK, on 10th May 2007, the members voted for the organisation to be known as NACT UK and opened up the membership to FTPDs, ES', SAS Tutors, CTs and MEMs and anyone involved in PGME who share our aims.
