

Dr Sara Evans graduated from Bristol Medical School in 2001, and after a time working abroad in New Zealand, completed the rest of her training in the Severn Deanery. She has an MSc in Gerontology from King's College London, and took up her consultant post in 2013. She is the Foundation Year 1 Training Programme Director at the Royal United Hospital Bath RUH, the Severn Foundation School Education Strategy lead for Foundation and the national FTPD representative for Medical Education Leaders UK, representing the organisation at the UKFPO. She has developed successful management courses for Foundation doctors across the region in conjunction with both the Royal Naval Reserves and Army Reserves in Bristol. She is also a core member of the South West Clinical Senate, with a particular interest in workforce and education.
